

The Veil of Normal

The bustling citidel is built precariously on a towering pillar of coal. A valuable resource that fuels an alchemical fire that renders a versatile “intelligent glass”.

Tireless miners hollow out the mass of the dwindling deposit. They create an intricate network of tunnels and rooms that eventually become dense living spaces for the growing populace. Deep into the core they find a rich mineralized springwater that brings life to all things – an essential element for the desert town. The dusty plain surrounding the old town extends into the horizon – only the Greyberry tree grows here. All citizens are orderly and busy. A certainty about everything is absolute...
